

Good Neighbors.

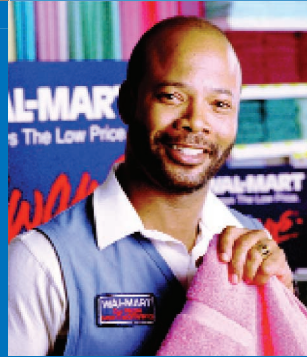

...That's What Wal-Mart Is All About

Wal-Mart has succeeded by making customer service our number one priority, but we feel just as strongly about serving the communities where our stores are located and where our associates live and work. With that in mind, we focus on helping the neighborhoods around us thrive and prosper.

We recognize that some residents have concerns like land use and the environment, traffic flow and competition to existing local merchants. Not only have we addressed these issues in great detail as part of our design plan, but in the coming months we will be hosting meetings to get better acquainted and to give you a chance to ask any questions you might have about our new store.

We sincerely believe that what's best for our neighborhoods is what's best for Wal-Mart. So let us assure you that we recognize the importance in not just establishing a successful store, but in building relationships with you as customers.

Wal-Mart wants to prove to you that we are more than “good corporate citizens”. Our stores and associates are, quite simply, good neighbors.

Yes, I agree. This new Wal-Mart Supercenter belongs in my community.

I want the new jobs and economic benefits for Cascade community that the new Wal-Mart Supercenter provides
